Forms of Ownership Explanation

As a property or homeowner, your deed defines the form of ownership and how the title for the property changes upon the death of an owner.

The following definitions are the most common references in a deed:

Sole Ownership

- Only one person owns the property, solely by themselves, and no other person has any interest in the property.
- Upon the death of the sole owner, the interest passes to those listed in the will or as determined by probate.

Joint Tenancy

- Two or more joint tenants together form an undivided interest. These interests are equally divided between the tenants, accruing under the same conveyance, and beginning at the same time.
- The tenants have the right of survivorship, and upon the death of a joint tenant, interest in the property passes to the surviving tenant(s), rather than to the heirs of the deceased.

Tenancy in Common

- Two or more tenants together form an undivided interest, where the interests may not be equally divided between the tenants.
- Upon the death of a tenant, no right of survivorship exists, and interest passes to those listed in the will or as determined by probate.

Tenancy by the Entirety

- A form of ownership where husband and wife each own the entire property together.
- In the event of the death of one spouse, the surviving spouse owns the entire property without probate.
